Side 1, which is 21 minutes in length, features a man (probably Henry Vink) stating phrases (e.g. "What kind of fish goes up this river?", "What is the name of your child?") and a woman (possibly Emilia Grant) replies with the Haisla translation. Side 2 does not feature First Nations language material; documentation with the tapes describes it as "Lesson 33". It first features a radio interview with James Baldwin about a bad fall he experienced hiking the Hudson's Bay Mountain in 1977; all he suffered was a twisted knee. It then features a radio interview with Dirk Mendel about a run-in he experienced with a grizzly bear during a hiking trip near Kitimat B. C. The radio program is identified as Pacific Noon. Gisela Mendel is identified in the documentation accompanying the tapes as the Kitamat Museum Curator from the 1970s to the 1980s. There's then a weather update focusing on the Nas Region.
